POLICE ORDER OF SYLVESTER WENT ASTRAY

Mystery in Failure of Instructions to Be Effective.

Officers Now Refuse to Discuss Sale of Tickets.

Chief interest in the method of disposing of tickets for the police Superintendent of First Police Precinct. benefit fund centered today in the mystery concerning the failure of Major Sylvester's instructions about the disposal of tickets in certain quarters of the city to be effective.

As published in The Times yesterday, the superintendent of police says that he positively prohibited the sale of seats to suspicious women. Patrolman McDonnell, a trusted veteran of the force and a capable policeman, said without hesitation that he had sold tickets to such McDonnell Refuses to Talk.

A Times reporter this morning endeavored to obtain a statement from Patrolman William McDonnell as to whether he had ever received any orders against selling the tickets to disorderly houses from his superior officers.

He declined absolutely to talk to the reporter or to have anything to say regarding the matter today, although admitting yesterday that he had sold the tickets in small number to a number of the women of his beat, adding that he had nothing that the rooms which had been used for to conceal and that his full list the purpose of holding examinations for was subject to inspection.

He denied absolutely at that time that any woman had been forced to take $25 worth of tickets, as alleged by one of the women.
